HIGH STAKES. HIGH STRESS.

Is This What Learning Looks Like?

The MCAS doesn't help students learn—it just makes them anxious.

VOTE YES on 2

and be part of the solution in replacing the problematic MCAS test.

Problem: The High-Stakes MCAS test is causing High Stress for students.

Solution: Focus on real learning, not just test scores. We can maintain the high standards of our schools without the high-stakes MCAS graduation requirement. Then, students can focus on learning in healthy environments without anxiety-inducing tests hanging over them.

Problem: The MCAS dictates how teachers teach their students.

Solution: Put trust in our dedicated teachers. We need to believe in teachers and their ability to assess the student, unlike one-size-fits-all tests that judge them based off a number. If we replace the MCAS graduation requirement, teachers can focus on skills like creativity, critical thinking, and problem solving—not memorization and filling in test bubbles.

Problem: Parents have no say in testing.

Solution: Empower parents. By replacing the MCAS graduation requirement, parents can play a larger role in their child's education. Parents know their child best and should be empowered to work with teachers to support their child's strengths and learning.
